

[1] Unless the West Michigan Mayhem defeat the Chicago Force this week, which is highly unlikely. Also, the Crash and the Reign play this week; the winner of that game will have home field for Round 1 of the playoffs.

[2] The Phoenix and the Sabers play each other this week; in their last game the Phoenix won 57-13. So the Sabers need to win by 45 points or more on Saturday in order to be the div champs, otherwise it's Atlanta.

[3] The Arkansas Wildcats and Memphis Dynasty play next week. The winner of that game will be the Div 13 winner.

[4] The Bay Area Bandits and the Central Cal War Angels play next week; the winner of that game will be the Div 16 champ and the other will be the Div 16 wildcard.

[5] The San Diego Sting have a current div record of 3-1 while the Las Vegas Showgirlz are 3-1. They play this week; if Vegas wins, they'll be 4-0 vs. San Diego's 3-2, game over. If SD wins, they'll be 4-1 to Vegas's 3-1, but they played an extra in-division game (!) so it goes to head-to-head record, which means SD has to win by 24 points or more. If they don't, Vegas is div champ.

[6] Right now the Tallahassee Jewels are listed as being 4-0 within their division, which would make them definite division winners. However, two of those wins were forfeits by a team that folded, and some people believe that they will not be counted for playoff purposes which would make the Acadiana Zydeco a playoff contender as well. If I can find any clarification on this from the WFA I'll update this. Right now it's just a mess.